R EPRESENTATIVE BARTHOLDT quet in Milwaukee:

"Those people remind me of the old man. Yes, they remind me very much of the old man. man I'm speaking of-and he sat on a line, as if he were fishing; but the line, with a worm on the hook, dangled over a bed of bright primroses.

over a bed of bright primroses.

"'Daft!' said a passerby to himself.
'Daft. Bughouse. Nice looking old fellow, too. It's a pity.'

"Then, with a gentle smile, the passerby approached the old man and said:

"'What are you doing, uncle?'

"Fishing, sir.' answered the old man, solemnly.

"Fishing, sir.' answered the old man, solemnly.
"Fishing, eh? Well, uncle, come and have a drink."
"The old man shouldered his rod and followed the kindly stranger to the corner saloon. There he regaled himself with a large glass of dark beer and a good five-cent cigar. His host, contemplating him in a friendly, protecting way as he sipped and smoked, said:

"I arrest you, sir, in the name of the law!"

"The proprietor's mouth opened in astonishment. He swallowed two or three times, then he gasped:

"Wh—what for?"

"For serving me a pheasant out of season, said the game warden.

"A look of relief appeared on the proprietor's face.

"Oh,' he said, 'that wasn't pheasant. It was crow."

The Strategist.

R EPRESENTATIVE GARDNER, discussing the question of armaments at a Washington banquet, said, "The public is astonishingly ignorant of warfare and everything pertaining to warfare. The public in this matter indeed, is but little more enlightened than old Cornelius Husk. "Husk and a group of his cronies were talking war on a fresh April evening round the red-hot stove in the general store.

"'Wall,' said an old fellow with white bonnet-string whiskers running from ear to ear under his chin—'wall, it seems that now the Germans, or Botches, as the French calls 'em—it seems that now the Botches are agoin' to commence guerrilla warfare.'

"Oh, my!' said Corn Husk. 'I hope not. I certainly do hope not. Them there gorillas are altogether too strong and savage to put up against white men."
